

Connected Communities: A new approach to digital citizenship for students

Connected Communities is an immersive 3-day program for 4th- and 5th-grade students, educators, and parents, delivered in person by a Bark expert with virtual follow-ups throughout the year.

What's included

Student workshops

Hands-on and at-home training in topics like group texting, media literacy, social media, cyberbullying, and more.

Parent engagement

Real-life guidance and tools for raising safer digital citizens, straight from trusted online safety experts.

Educator training

In-person sessions that tackle today's toughest digital challenges, including emerging threats like AI.

See why educators are excited about the Connected Communities curriculum

“This type of constructive, hands-on training will leave a lasting impression on our students that we hope will translate into a lifetime of responsible and effective internet and device use.

—Jacque Fewin, executive director of technology, Lubbock-Cooper ISD

Visit bark.us/learn/barks-connected-communities to explore program details and impact.